

SOCIAL STIR IN BALTIMORE

WITH AN IRRALITE.

The Couple Unable to Get Married in Baltimore or Norfolk, Va., Hide Themselves in a Border Town in North Carolina.

BALTIMORE, June 20.—The elopement of young lady, reared in the Episcopal Church with a young Israelite of Norfolk is a social sensation in the western part of this city. The woman was born at New York City, where she was educated by Mr. John J. Hopwood of 365 West Lombard street, well known in musical circles as a member of the choir of the P. E. Church of the Ascension, Lafayette square. She is now 16th year, and though unusually well developed for her age, was regarded at home as mere child, being the youngest of Mr. H. Hopwood's children by a deceased wife. The father is a well known musician, who has resided on Lombard street. Last spring, while attending a confirmation class was being formed by the rector, the Rev. E. L. Kern, Miss Hopwood was urged by her father to become a candidate, but she replied, as they thought it might reflect upon her father's religiousness. The young man is Mr. Wm. Oberlander, aged 23 years of Norfolk. He was a student of the Catholic University of America, 384 West Lombard street, opposite the house of Miss Hopwood. It is thought that the marriage will take place in the near future. The present Mrs. Hopwood says Miss Calista never out later than 7 o'clock on an evening, and that she had no opportunity to know that they met afterwards at Mrs. Lanier's house. On Saturday afternoon, June 9, Miss Collier left for Washington, D. C., at 10 o'clock, and would return in the evening. As she did not return, Mr. Hopwood became alarmed and called on his friends to see if they had gained no tidings of the missing girl, and the night was passed in great anxiety. On Sunday morning, June 10, at about 10 o'clock, a young lady and John Oberlander enter a carriage. It was also ascertained that they were the same persons who had been seen the Pence to be married, but were refused on account of the youthful appearance of the lady, notwithstanding that the young man produced a license. They then visited a well-known dry goods store on Baltimore street where a more womanly outfit of silk was purchased for the young lady. The long, girlish flaxen curls were transformed into a demure-looking langtry knot, and other devices of the toilet were resorted to so that the youthfulness of the would-be bride might be concealed. In vain, however; for on applying to have

It was then growing late, but the marriage was by no means given up. The young couple, who had been married in Norfolk, had engaged partners, registering himself as intended wife in their proper names. On arriving at Norfolk they again made persistent inquiries, but the same result was obtained. He could not find out where the young lady was of age, as required by Virginia laws. Mrs. Oberlander, mother of the young lady, was then located in the town of Ringe, and it was arranged that they should travel to North Carolina, where the laws are less strict. On Monday the party drove thirty miles to a place just over the border, where the ceremony was performed by a Justice of the Peace. The young couple were then free to go home more were in a state of painful suspense. They were relieved, however, a few days later by the arrival of a letter from the young lady.

Yet No Tidings of the Woodhall Sisters

Mr. and Mrs. William Gill, Mrs. Agnes Woodson, with others interested in the Gill case, were up in the Yorkville Police Court yesterday. Harriet Alice Woodhall, in answer to whose charges of kidnapping the two girls were taken, said that she and Mrs. Gill and Mrs. Woodson were present, did not appear. The court officers said they could not find a trace of the sisters.

"This is the second time they have failed to appear," said the court.
